Management’s Discussion of Fund Performance

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

For the twelve-month period ending December 31, 2024, the FPA Flexible Fixed Income Fund’s Advisor Class (“Fund”) net return was 5.16%, which includes reinvestment of all distributions.

Believing that inflation was still on a path toward its 2% target, the Federal Reserve cut the Fed Funds rate by 25 bps in November. However, per commentary from Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell, subsequent inflation data points were “sideways”, not indicating a clear downward trend in inflation. Moreover, the outcome of the presidential election in November introduced greater uncertainty into the trajectory of the economy via potential policy changes (tax cuts, tariffs, immigration, etc.) and possibly greater federal indebtedness. While the Fed cut the Fed Funds rate by 25 bps again in December, the Fed also acknowledged the greater uncertainty surrounding inflation and the economy and left open the possibility that future rate cuts might appear more slowly, or not at all. As Powell described it, “it’s kind of commonsense thinking that when the path is uncertain you go a little bit slower. It’s not unlike driving on a foggy night or walking into a dark room full of furniture. You just slow down.”<sup>1</sup> The net result of Fed policy, economic data and the election is that the bond market recalibrated its expectations for the future path of interest rates. Whereas in September 2024 the market expected approximately seven 25 bps rate cuts in 2025, as of December those expectations had been reduced to less than two cuts in 2025. After decreasing for much of the year, Treasury yields for maturities beyond one year increased by 60-83 bps in the fourth quarter. For the full year, two-year Treasury yields were one basis point lower while three-year and longer maturity yields were 26-75 bps higher.<sup>2</sup> Spreads continued their yearlong decline into the fourth quarter. We do not generally view Credit (investments rated BBB or lower) as attractively priced but we continue to search and will seek to opportunistically invest in Credit when we believe that the price adequately compensates for the risk of permanent impairment of capital and near-term mark-to-market risk. On an absolute basis, we still see an attractive opportunity to buy longer duration, High Quality bonds (rated single-A or higher) which we believe will enhance the Fund’s long-term returns and the Fund’s short-term upside versus downside return profile.
